ILLUSTRATIVE SIDE LIGHTS. Tha way to Gaza from Jerusalem must have been at first through rocky places as now, if not barren or bearing only shrub bushes and scattering trees. At the plain toward the sea the road passes a fertile district. But we must remember that desert in Scripture often means only uninhabited land, not necessarily barren or sandy. The spot where tradition places the baptism of the eunuch is in a little brook passing through some of the finest wheat land now in Palestine. Chariots (v. 27) could not be used in any part of modern Palestine, excepting the road from Jerusalem to Jaffa. There must have been good roads in the days of the apostles. Many of them are with difficulty passable by animals now. The brook where there was water (v. 36) is a meandering...
